The Heyday of White Salt

Budai Salt Mountain

The vast expanse of salt fields that once spread around Budai is gone now, leaving only the 7-meter-tall Budai Salt Mountain.

23° 22'53.3"N 120° 10'07.6"E

Zhounan Salt Fields

The Zhounan Salt fields have been renovated to resurrect the salt culture, and visitors are now able to get a taste of salt-field production, life, and ecology by personally experiencing the different processes accompanied by professional interpreters.

23° 23'01.9"N 120° 10'02.6"E

Qingkunshen Fan-shaped Salt Fields

These fields, unique in Taiwan, were developed after an inland sea was filled in in 1975. They spread outward in a fan shape from salt-worker dormitories.

23° 11'35.1"N 120° 05'24.7"E

Fun with Fish

Waisanding Sandbar

This is the largest sandbar in Taiwan's offshore waters. The large shallow area beside its shoreline provides coastal residents with a place to raise oysters and catch fish and shrimp. Tourists can get to Waisanding by taking a recreational fishing raft from Dongshi.

23° 26'56.1"N 120° 08'09.5"E

23° 29'08.0"N 120° 03'29.1"E

Dongshi Fisherman's Wharf

Besides such attractions as green grasslands, white man-made beach, and wharf pathway, this area has a new photo hotspot: a twin-heart Tropic of Cancer marker. Here you can take a recreational fishing raft to Waisanding Sandbar, or enjoy scenes of the ecology and the sunset.

Budai Fishing Harbor

This is the largest fishing harbor on the Chiayi coast, and the one with the most fishing boats and rafts. It is also a departure point for ferries to Penghu. It has now transitioned into a tourist fishing harbor with a tourist market where visitors can buy fish and enjoy seafood. The Budai Yacht Harbor is nearby.

23° 23'02.7"N 120° 09'16.4"E

Qigu Salt Mountain

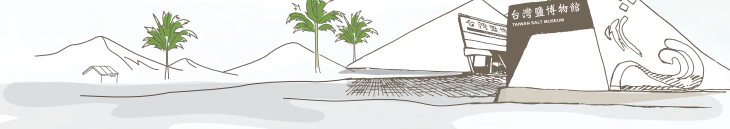

The Qigu Salt Fields were once Taiwan's largest-ever salt works, but with the decline of salt production they have been redesigned as a tourist and recreation area centered on the towering Qigu Salt Mountain.

23° 09'15.0"N 120° 05'59.9"E

Taiwan Salt Museum

This is Taiwan's only museum focusing on the salt industry, with two white pyramids enclosing displays of the island's salt-production culture as well as sales of creative salt products such as salt coffee and salty popsicles.

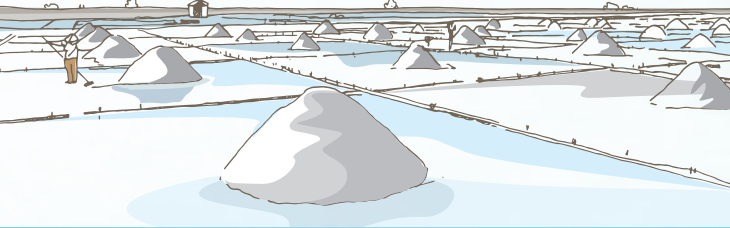

23° 09'19.5"N 120° 06'19.6"E

Jingzaijiao Tile-paved Salt Fields

These are Beimen's first salt fields and the oldest tile-paved fields existing in Taiwan. Forming a beautiful mosaic, they allow tourists to experience various salt-production processes.

23° 15'31.9"N 120° 06'27.3"E

Salt Ecologies

Chenglong Wetlands

Covering more than 100 hectares, these wetlands were once an expanse of farm fields that long-term inundation brought on by typhoon rains made it impossible to cultivate. Over two decades they have evolved into a wetland habitat that nourishes many bird and aquatic plant species.

23° 33'22.0"N 120° 09'51.8"E

Hukou Wetlands

After being left fallow for many years, these former sugar-cane fields have evolved into poetic wetland landscapes that attract countless little egrets, night herons, and other water fowl.

23° 32'11.0"N 120° 10'08.6"E

Aogu Wetland and Forest Park

This park comprises 1,500 hectares of a rich and varied environment that nurtures a diversified plant ecology along with the wildlife that is attracted to it. More than 200 species of bird have been recorded here.

23° 30'25.6"N 120° 09'24.8"E

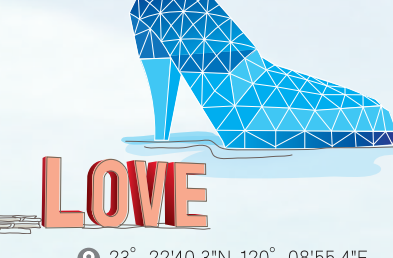

Romantic Silhouette

Haomei Village 3D Ocean World

This is Taiwan's first community-type painted village, with 18 3D paintings of deep-sea denizens such as sperm whales, giant squid, and lantern fish. Here you will also find Taiwan's largest 3D street painting.

23° 20'19.9"N 120° 08'16.0"E

High-Heel Wedding Church

Constructed of blue-tinted glass panes on a steel framework, this church is 17m tall and 11m wide. The contrasting red letters L-O-V-E in front make this a photo hotspot.

23° 22'40.3"N 120° 08'55.4"E

Beimen Wedding Wonderland

Centered on Beimen Visitor Center and linking with other nearby attractions, this area focuses on wedding photography. Historic buildings present new faces, numerous landscaping items and painted walls help create a scene of Mediterranean romance. Photo hotspots include the Crystal Church and Money Coming Store.

23° 16'01.9"N 120° 07'25.5"E

Haomeiliao Nature Preserve

With a vast windbreak forest, mangrove forest, and intertidal zone organisms, as well as beautiful ecological landscapes, this is a great place for wetland ecology education and observation that attracts hordes of photographers.

23° 30'25.6"N 120° 09'24.8"E

Black-faced Spoonbill Reserve

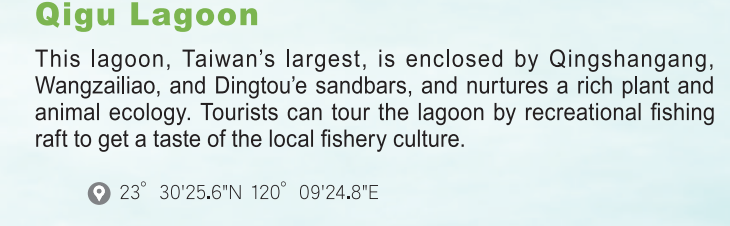

The tidal land at the Zengwen River estuary is rich in benthic creatures and plankton that attract large numbers of protected black-faced spoonbills to forage, leading to its designation as a reserve. A bird-watching pavilion allows convenient observation of these graceful birds, and an ecological exhibition hall introduces their life cycle and the wetland habitat.

23° 30'25.6"N 120° 09'24.8"E

Sicao Green Tunnel

The Green Tunnel stretches behind Dazhong Temple, the dense growth of mangroves on both sides making it a "mini-Amazon." Tourists cruise through the tunnel on rafts, with interpreters explaining this enchanting canal's water fowl and its plant and animal ecology.

23° 30'25.6"N 120° 09'24.8"E

Boziliao Taiwan Mythology Painted Village

23° 37'54.5"N 120° 08'57.7"E

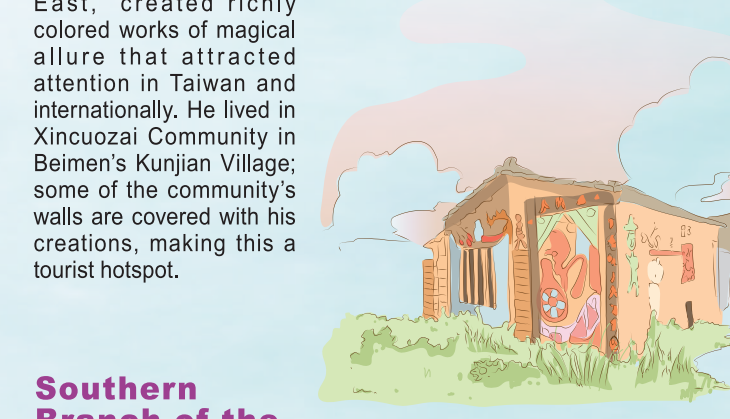

This area, with Boziliao's Putian Temple at its core, is noted for its humorous and playful 3D paintings that present a new interpretation of figures from Chinese mythology.

Former Residence of Hong Tong

The unschooled primitive painter Hong Tong, known as "The Picasso of the East," created richly colored works of magical allure that attracted attention in Taiwan and internationally. He lived in Xincuo'ai Community in Beimen's Kunjian Village; some of the community's walls are covered with his creations, making this a tourist hotspot.

23° 16'53.1"N 120° 08'29.0"E

Southern Branch of the National Palace Museum

This is the first large-scale national museum in Asia that combines the theme of "Asian art culture" with local cultural elements. The facility covers a large area, with a man-made lake, artificial wetlands, tropical garden, bankside stage, and other leisure facilities. The museum displays a rich array of artifacts and has all kinds of interesting exhibitions for you to visit.

23° 28'23.4"N 120° 17'33.5"E

A Land Clothed in Marsh

Jinhu Wanshanye Temple

This impressive edifice with exquisite wall paintings was founded in 1845 to pacify the souls of thousands of victims drowned by a huge tsunami. Its Water Spirits Festival, held in the sixth lunar month each year, is a unique religious activity.

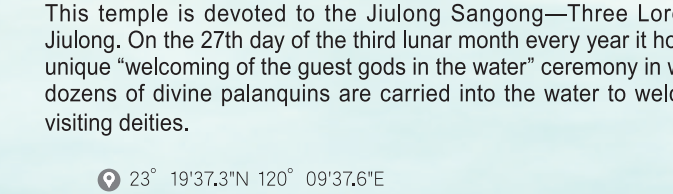

23° 34'27.6"N 120° 09'08.3"E

Nankunshen Daitianfu Temple

Devoted to five Wangye—plague gods—this is the largest Wangye temple in Taiwan. It is also a national historic site, and has been given three stars in the famous Michelin Green Guide.

23° 17'10.1"N 120° 08'35.1"E

Xinwen Jiaying Temple

This temple is devoted to the Jiulong Sangong—Three Lords of Jiulong. On the 27th day of the third lunar month every year it holds a unique "welcoming of the guest gods in the water" ceremony in which dozens of divine palanquins are carried into the water to welcome visiting deities.

Wanggang Taisheng Temple

This temple is devoted to the worship of Mazu (Goddess of the Sea) and five plague gods, and is a center of faith for Budai residents. The Mazu image here has been dated to the Ming Dynasty.

23° 14'18.9"N 120° 06'41.5"E

Sicao Dazhong Temple

This temple was originally established to placate the souls of soldiers who died in Cheng Cheng-gong's (Koxinga's) conquest of Taiwan and others who had no descendants to sacrifice to them. Later on, the god Zhenhai Marshal was moved in as host deity. Sicao Fortress, in front of the temple, was built for defense against the British following the Opium War.

23° 01'11.8"N 120° 08'06.4"E

Luermen Tianhou Temple

First built after Cheng Cheng-gong (Koxinga) landed in Taiwan in 1661 and rebuilt several times, the temple was finally rebuilt on its present location in 1977. In front of the temple is the famous Luermen Ancient Channel.
